

February 18, 1913

PAUL VOY

Paul Voy died at the home of his parents at Aberdeen on Sunday morning. The body will be brought to Groton for burial, and the funeral will occur tomorrow morning at 10:00 at the Evangelical Church.

Deceased was a young man of about thirty years, who grew up in Groton. His disease was tuberculosis, which attacked his throat.

Surely the Voy family have had unusual experiences. The older boy, Otto, was mourned for dead for some time several years ago. He was at work in a logging camp in Northern Minnesota. Having disappeared about the time that the dead body of a strange man was found in the vicinity, a picture of the corpse was enough like Otto to convince his parents and Groton friends that he had met with foul play. He turned up later, safe and sound, and is now living out in Washington. August Voy, who enlisted in the regular army met with a street car accident which caused his death at a post down in Texas.

Surely Mr. and Mrs. Voy have had their trials. Though they have not lived in Groton for many years, old time friends will deeply sympathize with them in their present bereavement.

Deceased was a brother of Mrs. Eli McFarlane.